No. 282.--50 and 51. Have you used driven wells successfully; of what sizes and depths, and singly, or in groups? What is the best form of pump to use with driven wells, where the lift is ten to twenty feet and air is likely to get into the suction 1 Should the pump be single or duplex, and with piston or plunger? Mr. J. 6. Briggs.--This method of obtaining a supply seems to be coming into general notice. In my opinion its success depends entirely upon the locality. This section of country (Terre Haute, Ind.,) for miles has a splendid bed of water-bearing gravel underlying it at a depth from the surface of from twentyfive to forty feet, about on a level with the bed of the Wabash river. It appears to me that the point in Query 51 in regard to air getting into suction pipes is not necessary to be discussed. There is no reason why air should get into the suction pipe, if the wells are properly driven and connected. At our pumping station we can draw over 2,500 gallons per minute from 10 eight-inch wells 24 feet deep. The pumps stand idle for weeks at a time, and we have no trouble with air. They are for convenience driven in what was formerly the...
