Excerpt: . . . in consequence of their participation in this affray, and for having become amenable to the law. Two things are here evident: that the success of the society had become such as to make it a matter of great and vital importance to gain admission; while whisky led to the death of a stranger, the transportation of one of our most useful artisans, the dismissal from the society of a second, and the suspension of a third. CHAPTER XVIII. GOVERNMENT. Under this head, I do not think I can do better than adopt the following characteristic though somewhat burlesque sketch from one of Mr. Finchs letters: --The form of government adopted at Ralahine (Laws 37 and 40 to 43) combined all the advantages of Toryism, Whiggism, and Radicalism, without any of the defects of either; it had all the strength, unity of purpose, and unity...
