Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Over the past few years I have been collecting postcards of old Norfolk post offices and also hunting around to see if they still exist. But this was not on foot or by car, this was a virtual tour as I did this using Google Earth - the ambitious and sometimes controversial mapping program we have all no doubt heard of by now. Finding each post office was an interesting pastime and I began to put a lot of this together on my website at where you can see some post offices as they were then and as they are now. Then one day I thought it might be nice to make a little book as a companion together with a bit more information about each one and this is what you see here. Information comes from various sources but a lot of it from reading through copies of Kelly's Directories of Norfolk covering the early 1900s - so the town descriptions you read here are renditions of information from that time. I quote or paraphrase the introductory information as relayed in the directory. I think this gives a sense of what it was like back then in terms of travel arrangements and so on. It's certainly eye opening to read about so many railway stations that have now been lost. Details of who held the position of sub-postmaster or sub-postmistress in a certain year also come from Kelly's Directory. If I have been able to find them, there then follows details taken from the various censuses, usually from 1901 or 1911. The postcards I have selected mostly date from the early 1900s and where possible...
